

Hand in Hand for a better future

FESCA (Federation of European Scleroderma Associations) is an umbrella group that supports its national member organizations and acts at a pan-European level to promote and achieve its objectives in alignment with the aims of the national groups it represents.

If you would like to join, support or learn more about FESCA visit:

www.fesca-scleroderma.eu/

Scleroderma is an autoimmune disease that causes severe disability and can be life threatening. It is characterized by hardening of the skin and in severe cases also affects internal organs. 2.5 million individuals worldwide are diagnosed with scleroderma for which there is no cure. We call for explicit plans by governments and health policy makers at National and European level to improve the livelihood of people with scleroderma.

If you would like to learn more about scleroderma visit:

<http://worldsclerodermaday.org>

Supported by:

Federation of European Scleroderma Associations